U.S. Sees Syria Link To Terror

Israeli Report On Bombing of Disco Is Cited

By Jim Anderson
United Press International
WASHINGTON — The United States "has no reason to doubt" Israeli claims that Syria was involved in the Libyan-backed bombing of a West Berlin nightclub, the deputy secretary of state John C. Whitehead said Tuesday.

New NASA Head Says Shuttle Should Fly Again in July 1987

WASHINGTON — James C. Fletcher, the newly appointed head of the U.S. space agency, announced Tuesday that space shuttle flights should resume in July 1987 for the first time since the Jan. 28 loss of the Challenger.

President Ronald Reagan ordered a bombing raid on Libya last month, citing "irrefutable" proof that the Qadhafi government had ordered and executed the April 5 attack at the La Belle discotheque in West Berlin, in which one U.S. serviceman and a Turkish woman were killed and scores were wounded.

Of Syrian links to the bombing, Mr. Whitehead said: "We have no reason to doubt what the Israelis have said. It's their information, not ours, but we have no reason to doubt it as far as the disco is concerned. That wouldn't be inconsistent with information that we have."

As to the difference between Libya and Syria, Mr. Whitehead said: "We believe Qadhafi's terrorism is particularly reprehensible because he boasts about it. We have some reason to believe that Assad is trying to suppress it and we are encouraging him to do it more actively."

Meanwhile, the Syrian Embassy in London said that three Syrian diplomats expelled from Britain for refusing to answer questions about an attempt on April 17 to smuggle a bomb aboard an El Al jet in London had left Britain on Tuesday.

Soviet Aides Say Leak Of Radiation Is Ending

By Carol J. Williams
The Associated Press
MOSCOW — Western diplomats said Tuesday that they were told by Soviet officials that radiation leaks from the Chernobyl nuclear power plant, while new reports revealed that a catastrophe was narrowly averted last week.

The national television news program Vremya announced that a speech by the Soviet leader, Mikhail S. Gorbachev, would be carried Wednesday night, but gave no indication of the subject of the address. Mr. Gorbachev had made no public statements on the April 26 accident at the nuclear plant.

Kuwait May Switch Investment From West

By Rory Channing
Reuters
KUWAIT — Kuwait has served notice on Western financial markets that it is reviewing the appeal of its huge foreign assets and may shift investments to the United States, which Mr. Kharafi recently paid more than 4.22 billion dinars ($7.7 billion).

Mr. Kharafi was replying to a question from a member of the Kuwaiti parliament, Ahmad al-Rabi, who had described the U.S. freeze when it was imposed as "dangerous international policy."

The finance minister said that Kuwait had reviewed risks to its investments and taken steps to seek investments for Kuwait funds in currencies and inflation, as well as political factors, he said.

Banking sources estimated Kuwait's reserves at the end of the financial year ending last June at about $80 billion, much of it in the United States and Western Europe. Annual income on the investments totaled around $4 billion.

Reports Say Waldheim Aided in Deportations

By Elaine Sciolino
New York Times
UNITED NATIONS — As a first lieutenant in the German army in World War II, Kurt Waldheim provided information that helped deport thousands of Italian soldiers into forced labor in Germany after Italy's surrender to the Allies in 1945, according to German documents.

Robert E. Herzstein, professor of history at the University of South Carolina, said the documents indicate that the former secretary-general of the United Nations was involved not merely in information gathering, as he has said, but directly in operations and in intelligence during his service in the Balkans between 1942 and 1945.

He said he had seen the documents in the National Archives in Washington. Mr. Waldheim, a candidate for the Austrian presidency, failed until recently to acknowledge his war service.

He has been accused of involvement in attacks on Yugoslav partisans and with having known of the deportation of Jews from Salonika, Greece, to Nazi death camps, but has denied the charges.

Backlash Feared Over California's Ethnic Growth

By Jay Mathews
Los Angeles Times
MONTEREY PARK, California — Three years ago, when this Los Angeles suburb was named an All-American City, the colorful string of Asian shops and restaurants along Garvey Avenue and the city's new Chinese and Spanish seemed to herald the future — integrated, prosperous, peaceful.

Now, the woman who was the first female Chinese-American mayor in the country and her two Hispanic colleagues on the city council are under fire from their own election defeat. Politicians as far away as Sacramento, the state capital, and Washington are wondering whether Monterey Park signals a rebirth of anti-immigrant politics that appears in turbulent times in U.S. history.

Despite an influx of legal and illegal immigrants, California voters had remained surprisingly uncontentious until recently, at least in comparison with the violent way they reacted to the last major immigrant group a century ago.

And despite grumbling about county hospitals full of penniless immigrants and sharp debates about bilingual ballots and elementary school classes taught in foreign languages, no significant ethnic strain since World War II has appeared to turn on the immigrant issue.

Now, however, California is moving toward what demographers say is the inevitable day, perhaps as soon as a generation away, when Anglos, as Caucasians of non-Latin extraction are called here, will become a minority of the state's population. The strain is beginning to show.

Taiwan Will Talk To China

Airline Requests Direct Meeting, First Since 1949

United Press International
TAIPEI — Taiwan agreed Tuesday to hold direct talks with China for the first time since the Communist takeover of China in 1949.

The talks, which would be held in Hong Kong, would center on the return of 10,000 Chinese to Taiwan, the mainland by a direct flight. No date for the talks was announced.

China Air Lines, the flagship carrier of Taiwan, said in a statement that it had asked a third party, Cathay Pacific airline in Hong Kong, to contact the People's Republic of China to indicate that it wanted to open talks.

As recently as Monday, China Air Lines had said that it would refuse to negotiate with the Chinese in line with a ban on Taiwan-Chinese contacts imposed by Chiang Kai-shek in 1949. China Air Lines is indirectly owned by the Taiwan government.

Political observers in Taiwan viewed the offer to negotiate with representatives of the Beijing government as highly significant.

Officials from Cathay Pacific had no comment on the China Air Lines statement, and China Air Lines would not elaborate. But airline sources in Hong Kong said that the message from Taipei had been passed to the Beijing government.

The China Air Lines Boeing 747 cargo plane, en route from Bangkok to Taipei via Hong Kong, landed at Guangzhou in southern China on May 3. The pilot, Wang Xijie, said he wanted to remain in China.

Two crew members on the plane said they wanted to be repatriated. China offered to return them both, the airplane and its cargo if Taiwan requested it.

China has been trying for years to get Taiwan to engage in talks to normalize relations with the mainland. But Taiwan has always refused. Diplomats had said that China was trying to use the plane incident to force Taiwan into direct communication.

The China Air Lines statement made no direct mention of Taiwan government. But because the airline is operated by the government, no move on the Taiwan side could be taken without government approval.

President Chiang Ching-kuo of Taiwan has said that direct talks, or even exchanges of postal and communications services, would be tantamount to a "de facto recognition" of the rules in Beijing as the legal Chinese government.

The airline statement called the situation an "isolated issue," adding that "the plane, its crew and cargo should be discussed as business matters."

It said that China Air Lines officials in Hong Kong would negotiate with the Civil Aviation Administration of China on matters concerning the release of a 747 cargo plane, its crew and its cargo.

Chiang Lin-chien, an independent member of the Taiwan National Assembly, said that the decision may help to legitimize some of the United Nations' ties with Taiwan. The Taiwan ban on trade with China remains in effect, despite a series of trade missions in dollars in exchange for goods from Hong Kong each year.

Mr. Wang said in Beijing that he wanted to defect to flee corruption and "traffic congestion" in Taiwan. He once flew an American U-2 spy plane mission over China and was said to be highly trusted by the Taiwan government.

535i 'Shadow'

Leave boredom behind.

Sooner or later, reality takes over from the dreams of youth. Success becomes part of a schedule, and covering long distances loses any sense of adventure.

But you recapture the sheer driving pleasure you enjoyed before routine took hold, in a rather special car: the BMW 535i 'Shadow'. This is the car that out-accelerates monotony. It is powered by a 3.5-litre, six-cylinder from the company that builds Formula One engines, monitored and controlled by Digital Motor Electronics.

For sporting high performance in perfect harmony with the refinement so typical of a BMW. A skilful blend of superb handling and active safety. German engineering combined with innovative technology, for instance an antilock braking system (ABS) as standard equipment.

A masterly technical achievement, clad in bodywork of lasting elegance. Unsurpassed dynamic potential, subtly suggested by the restrained 'Shadow' visual features: black window surrounds and side rubbing strips, body-colour door mirrors and bumpers.

The alternative for the individualist.

When you get to know the BMW 535i 'Shadow', you will be fascinated in a way that words can scarcely express.

Facing Evil:
Eichmann
Surprised
His CaptorBy Peter Kerr
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — On a chilly night in May 1960 Peter Malkin approached a slight, balding man walking home on a suburban street in Buenos Aires. "One minute, sir," Mr. Malkin said.

A second later his body foreman snatched around the man's neck, and Adolf Eichmann, the former Nazi SS officer responsible for the slaughter of millions of people, found himself under arrest by Israel.

"I had to wear gloves that night," Mr. Malkin, a former Israeli intelligence agent, recalled recently in his New York office. "I knew all the commands that came through that month. I had to put something between me and it."

Last month, on the 26th anniversary of the trial of Eichmann in Israel, Mr. Malkin spoke for the first time in the United States about his role in the undercover team that captured Eichmann, who had been living in hiding in Argentina. Eichmann was convicted of war crimes and hanged.

Until recently Mr. Malkin had maintained secrecy about his experiences.

A master of martial arts and disguise, Mr. Malkin was chosen by the Israeli intelligence services to seize Eichmann, the SS lieutenant colonel assigned by the Third Reich to engineer the "final solution" to the Jewish problem. About six million people were executed by the Nazis under the program.

Mr. Malkin, whose sister, nephews and cousins were killed in Poland under Eichmann's orders, was one of the first people to discover that one of the century's most sinister figures was essentially a common, ordinary man.

"Here I see a man like you and me," said Mr. Malkin, staring into the distance as he envisioned the bedroom of the villa where Eichmann was concealed by the hags to a bed.

"I had held his hand," Mr. Malkin said, "and I wondered, 'How could this be?' I tried to imagine six million, a row of six million waiting for their trains. It didn't work. I couldn't see it. It wasn't real."

Mr. Malkin, 58, describes his occupation as a consultant with expertise in "security and anti-terrorism."

He was born in British Palestine and said his earliest memories were of the 1930s, when his family returned to live among relatives in Poland. They left again for the safety of British territory shortly before the German invasion of 1939.

At the age of 14, Mr. Malkin joined the Jewish underground. He was a sapper in Israel's Army during the Israeli-Arab war of 1948. Mr. Malkin said he had been a veteran of covert operations by the time Eichmann was found in Argentina.

Peter Malkin, right, at his New York home.

A sketch of Adolf Eichmann in captivity, done by Mr. Malkin in 1960.

The Israeli government believed Eichmann had to be kidnapped without Argentina's knowledge because legal extradition was likely to fail.

In his book on the Eichmann mission, Isser Harel, the chief executive of Israel's secret service, identified Mr. Malkin as "El Yovav" and said he was selected for his strength and his ability with disguise.

On one Friday night before he left on the Eichmann mission Mr. Malkin disguised himself as a foreign student, using a device that changed the appearance of his mouth and the shape of his nose.

In the disguise, he appeared for dinner at his mother's home in Haifa. For several minutes, he said, he had been convinced that he was a stranger visiting at the request of her son. When he revealed his identity, his mother was startled.

"She yelled, 'You are going to kill me!'" Mr. Malkin said with a laugh.

Later that evening his mother guessed that he was going away on an important mission, he said. She would not believe his details. "Even a secret agent," Mr. Malkin said, "can't lie to a Jewish mother."

Eichmann had been living in Argentina under the name Ricardo Clement since 1950. A team of more than a dozen Israeli agents converged on Buenos Aires from various European cities in the spring of 1960.

For several nights, Mr. Malkin watched through binoculars as Eichmann walked from a stop on a commuter bus line to his home on an suburban street. He watched through Eich-mann's living room window as the men played on the floor with his 6-year-old son.

"I had imagined a criminal much larger," Mr. Malkin said. "I memorized the sound of his footsteps."

On May 11 the agents moved to capture Eichmann. They carried no weapons.

As two cars with other agents waited nearby, Mr. Malkin intercepted Eichmann near his home. At the last second, Eichmann stepped back in surprise.

As Mr. Malkin grabbed him, Eichmann let out a short scream. The two fell into a ditch, and several other agents grabbed Eichmann's arms and legs and shoved him into a car.

To the surprise of the members of the team, Eichmann was a pliant, even helpful prisoner. He quickly volunteered his true identity and said his actions had all been ordered by the German government.

As the team waited for an El Al airliner that would take him back to Israel in secrecy, Eichmann was imprisoned in pajamas in a bedroom with his eyes covered. Each day he was given exercise and fed another food.

As time passed, the two men began to talk. "I told him, 'You have a beautiful boy — I see him through the window,'" Mr. Malkin recalled.

Mr. Malkin said he told Eichmann: "He reminds me of another boy that could be have been his brother. It was my sister's son. The only difference is that this boy is dead."

At this, Mr. Malkin said, the prisoner clenched his teeth and looked terrified.

"He said, 'It's not my fault; he was Jewish,'" Mr. Malkin recalled. "He said, 'I have nothing against the Jews. On the contrary, I love Jews.'"

And with that, Mr. Malkin recalled, Eichmann began to recite in Hebrew a prayer often said by Jews on their way to execution: "Hear O Israel, the Lord our God, the Lord is One."

Shortly before Eichmann was searched about the Israeli airforce dressed as an airline officer, Mr. Malkin's commanders said they wanted the prisoner to sign a statement saying he was going to Israel voluntarily.

To get him to sign, Mr. Malkin said, he had Eichmann dress in the airline uniform, made up his face to look as young as it was when he commanded his SS troops and had him look into a mirror. Suddenly given back his identity by a figure of authority, Eichmann seemed to regain his strength, Mr. Malkin said. He poured Eichmann a glass of wine and played flamenco music on a record player.

"In a uniform he felt good again," Mr. Malkin said. "I said, 'Why don't you sign?'" Eichmann agreed.

It was a dozen years later, long after Eichmann's arrest had been scattered across the Mediterranean, that Mr. Malkin revealed his role in the case to someone outside the Israeli government. It was in a whisper to his mother as she lay dying and unable to speak in a hospital in Haifa.

"I said, 'Why don't you sign?'" Eichmann agreed.

"I captured Eichmann. I captured Eichmann."

Fitness Standards Slump
For U.S. SchoolchildrenNeglect of Physical Education, Proper Nutrition
Has Caused Obesity and Weakness, Studies ShowBy Jeff Meyers
Los Angeles Times Service

LOS ANGELES — Every morning during the school year, Skip Giancandelli watches a group of senior citizens work out on the track at El Camino Real High School here. Despite their age, he says, most of them run at least two and a half miles (four kilometers) without wheezing, stumbling or complaining.

And that is what sets them apart from a lot of children in Mr. Giancandelli's physical education classes.

"Just to get the kids to run is a chore," said Mr. Giancandelli, who also coaches football at the high school in Los Angeles's San Fernando Valley. "These kids mean, they're lazier and they have trouble running around the track even once. Kids used to really get into plays, but now you have to really drive them just to try things, and then when they try, they still can't do it."

Although a nationwide re-emphasis on reading, writing and arithmetic in recent years has helped increase test scores in reading and math, no such attention has been directed toward physical education. Meanwhile, studies show that children are not getting faster or stronger. In many cases, they are getting fatter and unhealthier.

The so-called fitness boom has not trickled down to schoolchildren. A recent study by the President's Council on Physical Fitness concluded that even in the age of aerobics and Nautilus machines, the fitness of children has shown virtually no improvement in the last 10 years and, in the case of girls 14 to 17, has deteriorated.

Another study undertaken by the Public Health Service two years ago found that children are fatter than they were 20 years ago.

George Allen, the former coach of the Washington Redskins and now chairman of the president's council, said he was "appalled" by the situation. "The best-kept secret in the United States today is youth fitness, or lack of," he said. "Kids have no endurance, no strength and very little flexibility."

The heart of the problem, according to Mr. Allen and other authorities on fitness, is that schoolchildren are not receiving the proper instruction in exercise and nutrition. Cutbacks in school budgets, they say, have greatly reduced the quality of physical education, particularly at the elementary school level.

"Lifestyles are formed by sixth grade," said John Calton, executive vice president of the privately funded National Fitness Foundation, "but the kids are not really learning anything except how to play on the tee-ball and the swing."

And when a child's lifestyle includes junk food, long hours in front of the television and an aversion to physical exercise, long-range health problems are almost a certainty. In 1983, nearly half of the 1,500 fourth-graders in Los Angeles who were examined by a University of California research group exhibited at least one major risk factor of heart disease, arteriosclerosis and stroke, including high blood pressure, high cholesterol and obesity.

At least one of the four authors of the study was not surprised by the results. "We were expecting it," said Dr. Joseph Cullen. "Kids are just not fit these days."

It has been 30 years since President Dwight D. Eisenhower became alarmed over the physical condition of youngsters and created the president's council. During the Vietnam War, President Lyndon B. Johnson boasted of "wholesome and welcome gains" in youth fitness, but the gains apparently were triggered by a rise in physical conditioning among draft-age young men.

A 1975 study by the president's council showed that youth fitness had reverted to pre-war levels. Although American elite athletes still dominate on the international level, Mr. Allen said the recent study by the president's council continued to find "major problems in youth fitness."

DESIGNED by the Institute for Social Research at the University of Michigan, the study was the largest of its kind ever undertaken in the United States. It sampled nearly 19,000 boys and girls, aged 6 through 17, from 187 schools throughout the country. The children took part in nine events involving standard athletic skills such as running, jumping and throwing. Some of the results:

• On the average, girls aged 14 to 17 performed worse than they had in comparable tests 10 years earlier in eight of the nine events. In the 50-yard (45.5-meter) dash, for example, the 17-year-old girls' average time was 8.3 seconds, a half-second slower than in 1975.

• Forty percent of boys aged 6 to 12 could do more than one pull-up; one out of four could not do any. Boys under 10 should be able to do at least two, say the experts.

• Seventy percent of girls 6 to 17 could not do more than one pull-up, and 55 percent could do none. Girls under 10 should be able to do one, with two the norm for girls 10 to 17.

• Forty-five percent of boys 6 to 14 and 55 percent of girls 6 to 17 could not hold their chin over a raised bar for more than 10 seconds. Girls and boys in that age group should be able to hold themselves up for 30 seconds.

• Fifty percent of girls 6 to 17 and 30 percent of boys 6 to 12 could not run a mile in less than 10 minutes. Eight- to nine-minute miles should be normal for teens, while younger children should be able to run it in under 10 minutes, according to the experts.

• Girls did not improve with age in upper-body strength; an average 6-year-old girl scored as well as a 17-year-old. Yet girls have the same capabilities as boys to increase their strength as they grow older, the experts say.

NYSE Lower as Buying Stalls

United Press International

NEW YORK—Prices on the New York Stock Exchange slipped Tuesday as buying stalled over questions about the course of interest rates, oil prices and economic activity. Trading was light.

The Dow Jones industrial average lost 1.99, to close at 1,783.34. Broader market indicators also were lower.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index eased 0.28 to 136.33. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index lost 0.17 to 236.41, and the price of an average share fell 17 cents.

Declining issues outpaced advances 918-673 among the 1,028 issues traded.

On the Big Board, 119,116 million shares changed hands, compared with 123,346 million Wednesday.

Analysts said the market is facing an uncertain course.

"The market is expanding a lot of energy without being able to move ahead," said Charles Jensen of MKI Securities. "One question whether it is as internally strong and confident as it was a month ago."

He and other analysts noted that the stock market ignored a bond market rally Tuesday and moved lower.

Oil prices saw-sawed Tuesday, falling on European markets and rising on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

After a week of gains, the Commerce Department reported a 0.5-percent rise in April U.S. retail sales, a weaker showing than most economists had expected.

Harry Wiley of Sutor & Co. in San Francisco said the market is in a correction that would complete itself by the end of May.

He said the Dow could drop to between 1,710 and 1,750 over the next two weeks before attempting to climb.

Spy was the most active NYSE-listed issue, gaining 1/8 to 72 3/4. Boeing Traveler followed, rising 1/4 to 20 1/4. AT&T was third, losing 1/4 to 24 1/4.

Among petroleum issues, Mobil eased 1/4 to 30 1/4. Chevron lost 1/4 to 40 1/4. Phillips Petroleum dropped 1/4 to 10 1/4. Texaco lost 1/4 to 32 1/4. Exxon dropped 1/4 to 58 1/4 and Occidental Petroleum eased 1/4 to 27 1/4. In the oil service industry, Schlumberger lost 1/4 to 31 and Hughes Tool eased 1/4 to 10.

In the technology sector, IBM fell 1/4 to 148 1/4. Digital Equipment dropped 1/4 to 85 1/4. Honeywell eased 1/4 to 77 1/4. Burroughs lost 1/4 to 29 1/4.

In the semiconductor group, Texas Instruments fell 1/4 to 138 1/4. Motorola lost 1/4 to 46 1/4 and National Semiconductor eased 1/4 to 13 1/4.

Among blue chips, Allied-Signal rose 1/4 to 49 1/4. American Express added 1/4 to 59 1/4. U.S. Steel lost 1/4 to 20 1/4 and Navistar eased 1/4 to 29 1/4.

General Motors fell 1/4 to 76 1/4 and General Electric eased 1/4 to 75 1/4.

Alcoa dropped 1/4 to 65 1/4 after falling 4 Monday. It gained last week making speculation.

J.C. Penney rang up 1 1/4 to 75 1/4. It reported first-quarter earnings of $1.16 a share vs. 67 cents a year ago.

Prices were mixed in active trading on the American Stock Exchange.

Wang Shipping led the Amex active, easing 1/4 to 42 1/4. Wang Laboratories Class B followed, losing 1/4 to 17 1/4. First Australia Prime Income Trust was third, dropping 1/4 to 11.

INVESTMENT IN PROGRESS

Dollar Straights Slump, but Volume Is Moderate

LONDON Continued The dollar-shilling sector ended with sharp rises Tuesday as a wave of selling on books during the afternoon was followed by a recovery. However, volume was moderate.

Prices of seasonal European exports

Prices of exports of the market ended Tuesday with a recovery. The shorter-dated notes were between 4 1/2 and 4 3/4 points lower, dealers said. A trade in the longer-dated notes was not particularly back.

U.S. dollar in the last few days

U.S. dollar in the last few days, our (the Eurobond) market has been to try to bring more back.

U.S. dollar at a U.S. securities sale

The U.S. dollar is currently at a U.S. securities sale. The market is responsive to good news. He said that says that U.S. April

However, dealers said that although most retail investors were sellers Tuesday, volume was not that high. One dealer at a Japanese bank commented, "There's been lots of noise, lots of talk, but not that much volume."

He added that the market did not open on a little towards the close as U.S. stock prices rose up from their lows.

As is often the case when the secondary market falls sharply, activity in the primary market was low. Banque Paribas Capital Markets launched a $100-million bond issue for Ansett Finance Ltd.

The issue was guaranteed by the Australian internal airline, Ansett Transport Industries Ltd., as well as being secured by a first charge

The day's other dollar straight was a $55-million bond issue for International Finance Corp., its third borrowing in the past week. As with the other issue, the issue is regarded as a "semi-private placement" and did not trade actively.

The issue pays 8 1/4 percent over 0 years and was priced at 101 1/4.

Last week's dollar-straight launch was also a $50-million bond issue, but paying 7 3/4 percent over eight years and priced at 100 1/4.

The anticipated French franc launch for Japan Air Lines emerged as a 700-million-franc, 10-year bond issue. It pays 7 1/2 percent and was priced at 100 1/4.

The issue was quoted as a dis-

■ European Bond Issues

Major foreign banks said they expected the Finance Ministry to allow them to start issuing European bonds next month. Reuters reported Tuesday from Tokyo.

Humphrey Norrington, deputy general manager of Barclays Bank PLC, said the Barclays PLC subsidiary in Tokyo intended to be the first bank to float a European bond if the ministry deregulates these issues, as expected in June. "It's a very good market in which to raise funds," he told reporters.

WASHINGTON — President Ronald Reagan will nominate Robert Heller, director of economic research at Bank of America, to become a member of the Federal Reserve Board, and Governor Michael H. Johnson to become the board's vice chairman, the White House announced.

Mr. Johnson, who joined the seven-member board in February, will succeed Preston Martin, who resigned at the end of last month as vice chairman. Mr. Heller will be Mr. Martin's unexpired term on the board.

Both nominations, which were

Volcker Remark Pushes Up Dollar

NEW YORK — The dollar staged a healthy advance Tuesday in New York following remarks by Mr. Baker and Mr. Volcker. Mr. Baker, 3d and Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul A. Volcker that were interpreted as mildly supportive for the currency.

The dollar gained almost 3 pennings from Monday's close, to end at 2.1983 Deutsche marks. It also surged against the French franc and the Swiss franc.

The U.S. currency had closed slightly higher in Europe, boosted at the minute by Mr. Baker and Mr. Volcker's comments.

Mr. Volcker said that the dollar's fall Monday to a record low of 159.99 Japanese yen in Tokyo trading "doesn't make me happy."

Dealers said the Fed chairman's comment triggered heavy buying of the U.S. currency on Tuesday.

HELSINKI—The Bank of Finland raised its key interest rate Tuesday for the first time in months to counter rumors of imminent devaluation that had sent the Finnish currency under pressure for the previous two days.

The governor of the central bank, Rolf Kullberg, said he hopes the two-tier call money rate soon will be lowered, but that the increase was aimed at showing the world that Finland would not

Mr. Johnson, 37, was assistant Treasury secretary for economic policy before being named to the Fed.

Four members of the Fed board—Mr. Martin, Mr. Johnson, Martin S. Segal and Wayne D. Angell, voted in late February to reduce the Fed's benchmark discount rate over the objections of the Fed's chairman, Paul A. Volcker.

The SEC said that Bahamian officials had agreed to freeze Mr. Levine's holdings.

Also named in the complaints were two Panamanian corporations, International Gold Inc. and Diamond Holdings SA, through which Mr. Levine allegedly conducted some trades, and Bernhart Meier, 35, of Zollikon, Switzerland, who until December reported Basically, the company will not change the terms for you, unless you are a top executive or have something very special to offer," says Ms. Webb of the British Institute of Management. "If you can, the best thing to do is to negotiate a good notice period."

U.K. Airline Plans In-Flight Casino

LONDON — A newly formed British airline proposes to enliven its 15-hour flights to the Far East with slot machines, bingo and blackjack on board a Boeing 747.

London Express, formed by a group of businessmen headed by Professor Michael Beesley, an aviation industry expert from the London Business School, intends to Start operations to Singapore on Oct. 24.

Seats on the new airline's leased Boeing 747-100 would be sold exclusively to tour operators running charters to the area. Slot machines would be installed on the upper deck, and bingo numbers will be called to passengers over in-flight headphones. Blackjack will also be available.

mind, and the decision was held abeyance until the central banks of West Germany and Japan agreed to reduce their rates, too.

Afterwards, Mr. Martin pressed White House officials for a promise that he would be named to succeed Mr. Volcker as chairman when the latter's four-year term expires August 1987.

When no promise was forthcoming, Mr. Martin resigned to pursue private banking opportunities in California.

The SEC said that Mr. Meinel acted as Mr. Levine's broker and bought for himself at least 18 of the securities issues, earning $152,000 in profits.

Mr. Levine, has been relieved of his responsibilities pending resolution of the case, said Angela Zerkow, a spokeswoman at Drexel.

Neither Drexel nor Mr. Levine's previous employers, Smith Barney and Lehman Brothers, were accused of any wrongdoing.

THE CHINA CARD

By John Ehrlichman. 523 pages. $18.95.
Simon & Schuster, 1230 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10020.

Reviewed by Christopher Buckley

IT OCCURS to me that Nixon, Kissinger, Al Haig, Chou En-Lai, Mao, Bob Helms — wait a minute, when's John Ehrlichman? Anyone seen John Ehrlichman? Hey, there he is, behind that typewriter, still setting scores. That racial, practically the only Nixon White House official who does not appear in this novel of intrigue is the author, and that is an act of supreme auto-kindness.

Ehrlichman has extended the fictional horizons of his first novel, "The China Card." The conceit here is that China's Premier Chou En-Lai conspired to cultivate a young lawyer on Nixon's staff in 1967 as an agent of influence, so as to manipulate Nixon into an eventual rapprochement. The young man, one Matt Thompson, becomes Nixon's right-hand man as he is used as a scapegoat of ambiguity between a facilitator and a spy. It is an excellent basis for a novel, and Ehrlichman's prose is good, but the novel is a little too much of a stretch for its characters, and is capable of good dialogue in high places.

He is also capable of such the following, in which Matt expresses gratitude to his girlfriend, a cardboard-punchboard WASP in a camel's hair coat who has just eliminated Matt's role on the campaign by whispering to Rose Mary Woods that the woman is a lesbian: "Right now I'm feeling very grateful to you, sweetheart. I guess I should have guessed you would do something, but I didn't know you were good with the brass knuckles."

"Only when you're involved, Matt. You're my love. I'd probably kill someone who was being mean to you. That's the way I feel about you. On your side, Cas me with a Saks Fifth Avenue charge card."

No one is very likable here, least of all the hero, but certainly the most unconvincing character is Doctor Henry A. Kissinger. One might have thought that Ehrlichman had amply vented his wrath on Kissinger by now, but the epicene well seems out to be practically bottomless.

The portrait here is of a towny little man, petty, egomaniacal, ruthless, paranoid, devilish, pompous and cruel. I kept waiting for him to strangle a puppy.

When he is not unrelentingly to resign he is insulting Nixon behind his back, calling him variously "that tower of jelly" and "an egg."

ON the diagrammed deal North ventured an unusual two-no-trump overall. He had reason to feel slightly alarmed of his opponent when East doubled firmly and doubled the return to three diamonds with equal confidence. West was much less confident, while South was feeling buoyant, but not over-optimistic.

Went led the heart king and shifted to his singleton trump. Dummy played low, and East inserted the nine to force the declarer's queen. South led a club to the king, and the moment of truth arrived when East won with the ace. He shifted passively to a spade, and South, after winning, cross-ruffed in clubs and hearts. When spades were played, East had to ruff and concede a trump trick to the dummy at the finish.

In the post-mortem, East wondered whether he should have taken the trump ace at once and played another. That would not have worked for South could maneuver to draw trumps and run his spades. But it was important to stop the club ruffs in the closed hand, and East could have prevailed after he won the club ace. He should have led the trump five at that point, or cashed the starved idiot." He is frantically engaged in trying to beat Nixon to China and into the history books. In one very clever scene Nixon decides to have some fun with Kissinger by telling him that he is thinking of sending Tom Dewey or George Bush to China to conduct the secret negotiations. Kissinger broods, until it dawns on him that Dewey has been dead for months.

There is a hefty Author's Note explaining that all this is made up. That is going to come as some consolation to the unfortunate wretches who appear under their own names. This is fiction with a hidden agenda: getting even. That and Ehrlichman's ability with a typewriter make it pretty entertaining, alas.

Christopher Buckley, author of "The White House Men," wrote this review for The W&A-ington Post.

The Lure of a Day in May

Dennis Russell Davies

Davis: "I'm not underestimating [the audience]. When the row over the Bountiful Community Center became public, the orchestras claimed it had not been requested. Some of the musicians were afraid to perform because of the socialists in modern music who could organize programs that could drive away audiences. Davis rejects this kind of categorization. "Friendship with living composers does not mean their music is my daily bread. I am able to conduct other kinds of music. I don't think the 'new music' argument as the reason at all. Like every other orchestra they had their own list of conductors and I was not on it. They said I'd like to bring their conductor chosen for me."

Davis left the orchestra's success related to wider times than the Second German nuclear life, such as what right musicians have, the role of politicians in cultural policymaking and the frustrations

He said five persons using such phone credentials were given jobs at Kennedy in New York and O'Hare in Chicago without the use of background checks, and that the Federal Aviation Administration was investigating the matter. He said he would be applied for a job at AT&T Security Service on April 21 — after being hired five months earlier at a salary of $10,000 a year for 10 or 12 work three days later. After "60 Minutes" filmed interviews with Bond, he called one of his references, John Mallon, vice chairman of DBI. said Mallon was fired "a few days after" he was asked the questions about his background.
